An exploration of Southern Jewish cooking and music benefiting the Southern Foodways Alliance

Monday, April 7th, 2008 • 7 pm

The Southern Foodways Alliance (www.southernfoodways.com) is a non-profit organization whose mission is to document and celebrate the diverse food cultures of the South. Their research has helped bring Roadhouse staples such as Eastern North Carolina pulled pork barbecue, Mason Tennessee fried chicken, and even Anson Mills grits to Ann Arbor.

Marcie Ferris, co-editor of Jewish Roots in Southern Soil: A New History, hosts this special fundraiser along with her husband, William R. Ferris, a celebrated scholar of the American South. His research into southern folk music and Marcie's research on Southern Jewish cuisine come together to serve up a flavorful look at Southern Jewish food with a side of the Blues!
